

Sudanese-Canadian Association of Ottawa (SCAO) March-April, 2006 Newsletter

Welcome Spring, to SCAO's families

Happy 50th Sudan's Independent anniversary to all of you from SCAO!

The Sudanese-Canadian Association of Ottawa (SCAO) in partnership with the Sudanese National committee (based in Toronto) for Sudan's 50th anniversary of independence celebration is organizing the second event in Ottawa.

Based on SCAO's board initiative plan, this event is planned for May 27th, 06. And based on this initiative plan, the event is planned to include: exhibitions (Art, posters and folklore items, event related souvenirs and maybe books). Two singers are expected to be with us that evening.

The date and plan of this event is subject to be changed based on singers & location availability.

SCAO's Women take the lead Hats off

During the last two month, the women family of SCAO's took the lead and managed to organize 4 group's visit to Ottawa's new families and to those, who were injured. As well they organized their new 'Breakfast Club' and executed one gathering at Cora's restaurant under 'Get away from husband & kids' intention☺.

Hats off to our great women. And honestly after the Canadian women Hockey team performance in Italy, I wish if we all can play like women☺.

SCAO's Back Injury Workshop

SCAO held a workshop on back injury in partnership with Hazeldean Family Chiropractic Clinic on Saturday April 15th @6:00 P.M at Sandy Hill Retirement Centre (353 Friel St), Where Dr. Pierre Paradis & Dr. Erin Davis have provided workshop's participants with comprehensive information on human's body structure and what Chiropractic Medicine for their wellbeing. Learning to spell a family affair

Fatma Elmahdi's home, where studying for tomorrow's CanSpell bee has been a joint effort between the 11-year-old native Arabic speaker and her mother, Tina Ahmed. Fatma uses an Internet audio guide to listen to the words that her mother then corrects.

"I'm better at correcting the words than pronouncing them," says Mrs. Ahmed. Mrs. Ahmed and her husband, Khalid Elmahdi, studied English in their native Sudan, a former British colony. But when it comes to the complicated mouthfuls that appear in a spelling bee, pronunciation is key.

"We both do each other a favour," says Fatma, a Grade 6 student at Fielding Drive Public School, of their study sessions.

The family came to Canada via India and then the United Arab Emirates six years ago, when Fatma was to start Grade 1. At the time, Fatma spoke little English and it would take a few years, and lots of after-school English sessions, before she felt comfortable with her new tongue.

As a rule, Fatma's parents try to speak Arabic at home, but it's easy to slip into the English that Fatma and her little sister hear outside the home. Every Saturday, Fatma takes Arabic lessons. She is just learning to read and write the script that has "lots of swirls."

Fatma's eyes go wide when asked if she could compete in an Arabic spelling bee. Not yet, she says. Fatma thinks it's important to learn more Arabic, like her parents. She was especially happy when she went to Sudan for the first time last year and could speak to her grandmother.

"To be multilingual is a great advantage," says Mr. Elmahdi. "The world has become like a small village now."

Katherine Bohn, Emma Bohn, Mahasin Elkhazin, Sierra Slegthenhorst, Emma Portner and Emma Cowie recently finished first at a regional CanDance event in Montreal

A the junior small group presentations. The tap routine is performed to the song "Proud Mary" by Tina Turner.

The group consists of the Bohn girls, Emma Cowie, Sierra Slegthenhorst, Mahasin Elkhazin, Marianne Lynch and Emma Portner. Each of the girls who range in age from eight to 12, to wear hot pink miniskirts and wild Tina Turner wigs.

Leeming Danceworks owner Sharon Leeming says the girls won the judges over with their enthusiasm and sense of humour.

"It's a really fun routine. All the girls are like a bunch of Tina Turner wannabes and the audience and the judges just loved it," says Leeming.

All the dancers will be spending the next two weeks preparing for the Ottawa CanDance event which will be held at the Palais des Congress in Gatineau from April 26 to 30. The Diamond Dance Off will be held on the final evening of the competition.
